

FIREWOOD LOGS

In this book Shez Courtenay-Smith tackles every issue that has puzzled her, tripped her up, or kept her enthralled, in sourcing the quantities of firewood logs needed to heat a substantial Victorian home in its entirety.

'Do not pay twice or even three times more than you need' is one of the book's key messages (you'll discover just how plenty of firewood buyers do exactly that)!

Also explored are the joys and hazards of bringing free or 'nearly free' firewood into the mix.

But these themes run alongside the real need for protection of your own good health and the assurance of your responsible, sustainable choices in support of the environment.

This book will be a revelation to all who either purchase firewood logs, scavenge for them, or come by them in any other way. It offers more than 100 pages of engaging, reader-friendly information and advice, great humour, copious illustrations, and the unravelling of numerous firewood-related mysteries for users of firewood logs - large or small users, experienced or inexperienced.

Here, Dr Shez Courtenay-Smith deploys her background in systems analysis and her later work in the teaching of communications skills, together with many years' experience in sourcing, fetching, carrying and stacking firewood logs ... scarcely to mention added experience in juggling, getting splinters, dropping logs on her toes, and burning them (the logs, that is)!
